AN INTRODUCTION TO LACANIAN PRACTICE

This seminar may be of interest to students of psychoanalysis (clinical or academic) who wish to gain an understanding of what distinguishes Lacanian psychoanalysis from other forms of psychoanalysis or psychotherapy. The instructor will provide an introduction to the Lacanian conception of psychological structure (e.g., neurosis/psychosis/perversion) with a particular focus on the fundamental differences that distinguish neurosis from psychosis. Psychological structure, once it is determined, guides how the analyst will position him or herself vis-à-vis the patient's speech. The establishment of the fundamental differences between neurosis and psychosis will ground our discussion of the clinical concept of transference (defined as a 'desire to know') and the specific 'ethical' stance that is required by the analyst when confronted by the differing fields of psychosis versus neurosis. In addition to the works of Freud and Lacan, this seminar will draw on the works of contemporary psychoanalyst Willy Apollon and philosophers Gilles Deleuze and Felix Guattari.

CLINIC OF LOST TIME: READING PROUST WITH LACAN, FREUD, AND BENJAMIN

Seminar organizer: Ben Davidson

“Proust’s most accurate, most convincing insights fasten on their objects as insects fasten on leaves, blossoms, branches, betraying nothing of their existence until a leap, a beating of wings, a vault, show the startled observer that some incalculable individual life has imperceptibly crept into an alien world.

Walter Benjamin

Proust’s monumental In Search of Lost Time famously concludes at the moment the protagonist decides to undertake the writing of the very book the reader is holding in his hands, a book “already written and yet now finally about to be written for the first time.” Taking this paradox as its impetus, this seminar will undertake a close reading of Proust’s final volume alongside a selection of texts by Lacan, Freud, Benjamin, Kristeva, Beckett, Deleuze and others, in an exploration of the multiple circularities of time and timelessness encountered in the psychoanalytic field.

How does the dance between narrative and the zeitlos inform the repetition, translation, deconstruction and reconstitution of “life stories” in an analysis? Applying literature to psychoanalysis, we’ll explore the various clinical and theoretical expressions of après coup, the tension between genetic and synchronic formulations in Freudian and Lacanian theory, the challenges of writing histories or narrative accounts able to encompass the “monumental history” posed by any given case—and elaborate a specifically Proustian notion of the case as a text or textile within which memory and oblivion are woven together like the warp and woof of a fabric, a web in which “the intermittence of author and plot is only the reverse of the continuum of memory, the pattern on the back side of the tapestry.”

Sessions will be structured around live readings, recorded audio and in vivo free association, parapraxis, interpretation and exegesis.

Meets bi-weekly on the Stanford University campus, beginning in October 2014. Free of charge.

Artists, thinkers, clinicians, writers and explorers of all stripes are welcome.

Year-long commitment required.

TRANSFERENCE AFTER LACAN

This course will focus on the unique contribution Jacques Lacan's concept of the transference makes to contemporary psychoanalysis and to psychodynamic therapies.

The course will follow the elaboration of the concept from Seminar VIII through Seminar XI, arguing his definition of the transference in terms of a "subjective disparity," contrasts starkly with intersubjective schools of analytic thought, and its more recent variant, interpersonal psychoanalysis. These latter schools of thought and practice tend to work within the interpersonal and imaginary register of the Ego's Discourse while losing sight of the radically singular nature of the unconscious. The course defines and differentiates concepts of transference and transference love throughout Lacan's work: from the imaginary register of affective transference in ego psychology, to the function of lack and desire (the gift of what one does not have); from the introduction of the subject supposed to know, to the transference as transference to the work of the unconscious, and to the remainder, residue, or leftover that serves as cause of the subject. By centering the seminar on this fundamental psychoanalytic concept, the course will serve both as an introduction to key Lacanian concepts for those first coming to Lacan's work, and an invitation to take psychoanalytic discourse further in the wake of Lacan's return to Freud.

The course will be offered on a monthly basis beginning in early October. Time, date, and location are to be announced. Please contact Christopher Meyer, PhD at cmeyerwoeswar@gmail.com if you are interested in attending this seminar.

SEMINAR ON PSYCHOSIS (LSP)

Annie Rogers, Raul Moncayo, and Magdalena Romanowicz

What is particular in the formation of the structure of psychosis? What is an effective psychoanalytic logic that puts the psychotic to work to build a subjective history? We will read Seminar XXIII, Joyce: Le Sinthome, Lacan's late exegesis on psychosis as a structure in which the knot of the Symbolic, Real and Imaginary has come undone, and can be knotted in a new way- through a sinthome that must be invented. This seminar puts Lacan's earlier work on the foreclosure of the signifier of the Name of the Father into a different register of possibilities. We will use the late Seminar as an orienting text to revisit his early Seminar III, Psychosis. In addition, we will listen to and discuss audio files of selections from Ulysses and Finnegan's Wake. Regarding the treatment of psychoses, we will consider the psychotic transference, as well as the difference between psychotic elements or symptoms and psychoses as a structure. We will explore how constructions as a form of interpretation in psychoses, can work to create a chaining of signifiers through the sinthome to produce a subjective history, to symbolize the holes in psychotic discourse, and to construct a Borromean knot.

The seminar will be located at Hampshire College in Amherst, Massachusetts, as well as online.

Dates: Saturdays, (2014) 9/27, 11/1, 11/29, 12/20, and (2015) 1/31, 2/28, 3/28, 4/25
Time: 1 pm to 4 pm EST

SEMINAR ON INTERPRETATION

This seminar will explore and discuss the concept of interpretation in the works of Freud and Lacan. We will track the concept and how it had developed and changed through the years of psychoanalytic practice. We will also try to answer the question: How is interpretation done today? Participants would be encouraged to discuss their own experience how they do interpretation in response to the demands of their patients and would have a chance to get feedback from other participants and from the teachers/co-facilitators. Other questions to be explored: What is the limit of interpretation? What is beyond interpretation? What is not to be interpreted and what cannot be interpreted? Has the era of interpretation already ended, as some analysts have declared? Or has it just begun?

This seminar will be done online using Webex video conferencing once a month from September 2014 to May 2015.

Schedule: 8:00-10:00 p.m., PST on the ff. dates: Sept. 17, Oct. 15, Nov. 19, Dec. 10, Jan. 21, Feb. 18, March 18, April 15, May 20.

2014-2015 SPECIAL EVENTS

ENCOUNTERING PHOBIA, COUNTERING FETISHISM; FROM LITTLE HANS TO BIG JEAN

Dany Nobus, Ph.D.
Brunel University, London

During his visit to the US in 1909, Freud was often asked to see patients, but he consistently refused to become involved in clinical work. One day a man sought Freud's counsel about his agoraphobic wife, and because the man in question did not take 'no' for an answer, Freud eventually gave in and sent him away with a peculiar piece of advice: "Let your wife go out with nothing but dirty underwear". This historical anecdote, recounted by Theodor Reik in one of his numerous fragments of nostalgic recollection, revolves around an intervention which is enigmatic as well as instructive, refined as well as cruel. In this seminar, I will unpack Freud's 'advice' in the context of a broader clinical discussion of the relationship between phobia and fetishism (sometimes called 'counter-phobia), drawing on the case of Little Hans and a little-known French case-study of a man with a phobia for 'one button'.

BESTIARUM VOCABULUN LACANIENSIS: A CONCISE HANDBOOK OF PSYCHOANALYTIC ZOOLOGY

Dany Nobus, Ph.D.

What makes us human? What are the defining characteristics of authentic humanity? Ever since Aristotle's famous definition of the human being as a ζῷον λόγον ἔχον (a rational, thinking animal), philosophers have consistently endeavoured to capture the humanitas of homo humanus with reference to language and reason, as a certain potential for abstract representation. During the 1950s, Lacan questioned this philosophical determination by advancing a seemingly more sophisticated 'principle of humanity', namely the capacity of 'pretending to pretend', with which he also distinguished between the (human) subject and the (non-human) animal. In this lecture I will re-trace Lacan's arguments and in particular his use of ethological observations (Lorenz, Tinbergen, von Frisch), through a critical reading of Derrida's works on animality and, more specifically, his last seminars on the beast and the sovereign. This will allow me to re-examine the nature and function of (symbolic) representation for (human) life qua subjectivity, and it will simultaneously open up new perspectives on the significance of Freud's crucial notion of the Vorstellungsrepräsentanz (the representative of the representation) for the (typically human) process of repression and symptom-formation.

PSYCHOANALYSIS WITH CHILDREN

Norberto Ferrer

The practice of psychoanalysis with children has specific peculiarities, just as childhood itself. In this seminar we will work with the following singularities in the treatment of children: the demands of parents and teachers and interviewing both of them, the game, the end of treatment, etc. We will also bring to life essential psychoanalytic concepts such as: the transference, the analytic act, knotting the Real, the Symbolic and the Imaginary, the paternal function, repression, Oedipus, the phallus, castration, etc.

Always starting with the clinic, we will put the efficacy of psychoanalytic treatment (the talking cure) to the test, via an examination of the work with 3 children:

- a 7 year old girl suffering an episode of acute anorexia, resolved in 2 weeks

- an 8 year old boy, diagnosed as "ADHD", who was riddled with disabling symptoms
- a 5 year old boy, who was suffering from school phobia.

PSYCHOANALYSIS WITH PUBESCENTS AND ADOLESCENTS

The end of latency, with the arrival of the "Metamorphosis of Puberty", exposes the child as a subject to changes, both physical and psychic. The re-inscription of a child's Oedipal experiences culminates with the subjective alienation of adolescence. The adolescent subject is pushed toward a subjective maze without equal: crisis, instability, confusion, misunderstandings, duels, confusion. The adolescent search for new meanings and ideals is precipitated by the real and radical transformation of their body, and psyche. In adolescence new forms of non-familial social ties are established and the adolescent is surprised by the stormy irruption of an unknown sexual jouissance (goce).

All of these changes which the teenager labels as experiences of painful solitude, sometimes leads them to request help. In this seminar, we will examine some of the symptomatic "solutions" that appeal to teenagers: repression, sublimation, identification, phallic solutions such as masturbation, various fantasies (women being men, being bisexual, having a child, have or be a parent or partner violence), various performances and symptoms (erectile dysfunction, premature ejaculation, frigidity, etc.) We will illustrate these changes and symptoms with several clinical vignettes.
